Mike's Easter Picks

Indaba 2016 Chenin Blanc (South Africa)

Fresh-cut green apple and white peach notes are laced with a makrut lime thread and backed by a bright honeysuckle accent on the finish.

$6.99

Villa Wolf 2015 Pinot Blanc (Germany)

Nervy lemon-lime acidity amplifies the fresh apple and pear flavors in this spry dry white. Its invigorating freshness and easy-drinking style lends wide appeal for a value price.

Vina Maitia 2016 Pipeno (Chile)

David Marcel, from France's Baque country, was working in Maule as a bulk wine broker while bilding his own project, Maitia, back in 2012. That's when he fell in love with the refreshing pipenos, the traditional wines of Chile's south, usually made from pais. He buys grapes from dry-farmed vines in Loncomilla, the pais (70 percent) is more than 100 years old, the carignan over 70 years old. The result is a lovely, refreshing and red-fruited pipeno, with vivid, shining acidity. It's the kind of wine you won't stop drinking.

Lakewood 2014 Dry Riesling (New York)

Brisk, with fennel, lime pith and green apple notes that zip through the finish.

87 Points Wine Spectator
$11.99

Finca Montepedroso 2014 Rueda (Spain)

The nose is fresh and subtle with austere aromas (nothing tropical here), with notes of freshly cut grass, orange peel and something citric. The palate is fresh and with good acidity; with musky aromas of grapefruit, hay, straw, quince, a touch of yeast, camphor and smoke that reminded me of aged Cava.

Urlar 2015 Sauvignon Blanc (New Zealand)

Fig, nectarine and grapefruit notes mark this as a ripe style, without much of the herbal pungency found in Sauvignon Blancs from Marlborough. It's medium bodied, with a silky mouthfeel and a long, harmonious finish.
